COAST OF JAMAICA.

From The Kingston Morning Journal Oct. 5.
Our advices by Saturday's post show that the Confederate Semmes is now cruising along our coast, in his new steamer the Georgia. In the maritime intelligence of The Trianny, it is stated that the Georgia passed the port of Falmouth at noon on Wednesday under fail steam and canvas, going at ten and a half knots an hour. She was on a cruise, and was boarded by a Montego Bay pilot. On Thursday, after the publication of The Trelanny, our cotemporary issued the following bulletin:
October 1 1882 Steam and Control of the Country of the Countr

cation of The Trelarny, our cotemporary as the wing bulletin:

October 1, 1863.—Since issuing our paper this morating, we learn that the Confederate steamer Georgia, which we reported off this port yesterday, was observed late in the afternoon to come into collision with another atom vessel; but from the distance at which the encounter took place—as seen by the aid of a telescopial is difficult to say whether the other vessel returned the fige or not. At all events, this much is cartain, the after the clapse of eight or ten minutes one of the vessels sailed away, evidently having the other in tow, and both work soon after lost to sight.
